

Results

The results must be organized in tables and graphs. Select this paragraph and make a table of your data on this page. The table must be labeled so that it is easily read by someone not familiar with the work. Remember to include the units of measurement. If quantitative data are not involved, a day-by-day log may be used in place of the tables and graphs.

The results from your table should be graphed if possible. Each graph must be labeled so that it is easily read by someone not familiar with the work. Graphs should be suitably titled and have both axes correctly labeled. Do not forget to include the units of measurement. Make a graph in your graphing program. Copy and paste your graph over this paragraph.

A discussion section that summarizes your findings should follow the data section. Discuss the average and range of your data. Select this paragraph and summarize your findings here.
